Owner-Operator Independent Drivers Association ("OOIDA") moves for leave to intervene as of right under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 24(a)(2) and in the alternative, for permissive intervention under Rule 24(b). For the following reasons, the motion is GRANTED.

I. DISCUSSION

This action has been described in detail in this Court's prior orders and by the United States Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit. See California Trucking Assn. v. Bonta, 996 F.3d 644 (9th Cir. 2021). Plaintiff's lawsuit contends California's AB5 is preempted by the Federal Aviation Administration Authorization Act or violates the dormant Commerce Clause of the United States Constitution. AB5 imposes a standard for determining whether a person seeking to earn a livelihood in the state is to be deemed an employee or an independent contractor for purposes of California Wage Orders.<sup>1</sup> While there are exceptions for some livelihoods, there are no statutory exceptions for 2 people who drive trucks in the freight transportation industry. According to the motion, OOIDA principally represents truck drivers that are independent truck owner-operators based throughout the nation. They have purchased or leased their own trucks and work on their own terms as independent contractors contracting with motor carriers. Mot. at 10. There are between 350,000 and 400,000 independent truck owner-operators in the United States. Id. at 11. Of those, OOIDA has 150,000 members located in all 50 states who collectively own and operate more than 200,000 heavy-duty trucks. Id. at 13. OOIDA contends that AB5 imposes a test that makes it impossible for independent truck owner-operators to continue contracting in California because they will be statutorily deemed to be employees of the firms with which they contract.

The International Brotherhood of Teamsters was previously granted leave to intervene to defend AB5. OOIDA seeks leave to intervene to challenge AB5. OOIDA seeks to challenge AB5 by contending that it violates the dormant Commerce Clause (i.e., Congress' power to regulate commerce among the several states (U.S. Const. Art. 1 § 8)). OOIDA seeks to intervene either as of right or as a matter of discretion under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 24. There is no party to the current litigation that primarily represents interstate truck owner-operator independent contractors who want to continue to do business in California.

Existing Plaintiff California Trucking Association initiated this action in 2018. At that time, the legislature had not yet codified the ABC test. That came later in the fall of 2019 with the enactment of AB5 and its effective date of January 1, 2020. AB5 was the

its previous name simply as AB5. 2

impetus for Plaintiff to amend its complaint and seek a temporary restraining order and preliminary injunction. Plaintiff pressed two main arguments that were mutually exclusive: federal preemption and the Commerce Clause. This Court preliminarily found 3 4 AB5 to be preempted by the Federal Aviation Administration Authorization Act of 1994 5 and dismissed the incompatible Commerce Clause claim. An interlocutory appeal was 6 taken and proceedings in this Court were stayed shortly thereafter in early 2020.

Although in early April 2021 it appeared that Plaintiff California Trucking Association was succeeding in its federal preemption attack on AB5, OOIDA moved to intervene to press the Commerce Clause theory from its unique standpoint as truck owner-operators based outside of California. OOIDA immediately agreed to stay its motion while district court proceedings were stayed and the appeal proceedings continued. The OOIDA motion was not only timely, but prescient. One week after the filing of its motion to intervene, the United States Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit reversed this Court's order and held, instead, that AB5 was not federally preempted (996 F.3d 644). The Court of Appeals stayed its mandate while California Trucking Association sought a writ of certiorari from the United States Supreme Court. The 16 United States recently denied certiorari and the Court of Appeals issued its mandate.

This Court has now reconsidered its prior order dismissing the Commerce Clause claim in view of the Court of Appeals' decision. Neither summary judgment nor trial has been scheduled. Meanwhile, the California statute has been repealed and reenacted with changes. Because the Commerce Clause question has yet to be fleshed out and because OOIDA members would be the individuals most impacted by enforcement of AB5 among people seeking a livelihood driving their trucks into and out of California, OOIDA is better-suited to prosecute its claim for relief. OOIDA's intervention as a plaintiff is also timely in that while preliminary proceedings have been stayed, the statutory landscape has changed and certain controlling judicial precedent has been established.

The standards for intervention as of right have been described in this Court's previous Order (dated January 14, 2019; Dkt. No. 21).<sup>2</sup> Courts normally "construe the Rule broadly in favor of proposed intervenors." United States v. City of L.A., 288 F.3d 391, 397 (9th Cir. 2002) (quoting United States ex rel. McGough v. Covington Techs. 4 Co., 967 F.2d 1391, 1394 (9th Cir. 1992)). OOIDA meets all four requirements for intervention of right.

For permissive intervention an applicant should show: (1) an independent ground for jurisdiction; (2) that the motion is timely; and (3) that the applicant's claim or defense, and the main action, have a question of law or a question of fact in common. City of L.A., 288 F.3d at 403 (quoting Northwest Forest Res. Council v. Glickman, 82 F.3d 825, 839 (9th Cir. 1996)). OOIDA also meets these requirements and its participation in the action would assist the Court by representing those whom the Commerce Clause generally protects, i.e., truck owner-operators engaged in commerce in other states who also want to do business driving into and out of California.

The State Defendants oppose OOIDA's intervention. The State Defendants say that the motion is not timely. The State Defendants rely on Kalbers v. U.S. Dep't of Justice, 22 F.4th 816 (9th Cir. 2021). Kalbers is the most recent opinion on intervention from the Ninth Circuit. But Kalbers is not the most persuasive case for the State Defendants. The Kalbers court reversed and remanded, ordering the district court to grant intervention, because the district court abused its discretion in denying intervention. Id. at 828.

- <sup>2</sup> For intervention as of right under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 24(a), the proposed intervenor must satisfy four requirements:
  - (1) the motion must be timely;
  - (2) the applicant must claim a significantly protectable interest in the action;
  - (3) the disposition of the action must as a practical matter impair or impede the applicant's ability to protect that interest; and
- (4) the applicant's interest may be inadequately represented by the other parties. Allied Concrete and Supply Co. v. Baker, 904 F.3d 1053, 1067 (9th Cir. 2018).

The State Defendants argue that the motion is untimely because it comes years after multiple iterations of the complaint. Responsibility for this is properly placed upon the State. Since the initial filing of the complaint, the legislature has twice enacted legislation bearing on the case. AB5 was enacted September 18, 2019, only months before the preliminary injunction was issued and appealed and proceedings in this court were stayed. Then, during the appeal, AB2257 was enacted on September 4, 2020 while proceedings in this court were stayed.

Kalbers teaches that "delay" is measured from the date the proposed intervenor should have known that the existing plaintiff would no longer adequately protect its interests. Kalbers, 22 F.4th at 824. Focusing on the date of the lawsuit or knowledge of the lawsuit is "the wrong inquiry." Id. Applying the correct rule to the facts here make clear that OOIDA's motion is timely. Until the Court of Appeals decided that AB5 was not preempted the California Trucking Association appeared to be adequately protecting OOIDA's interests. OOIDA filed its motion, but could not very well press its motion to intervene while proceedings in this Court were stayed. Once jurisdiction was returned to this Court and the stay lifted, OOIDA stood ready to intervene. The motion is not untimely.

The State Defendants also argue "undue prejudice" because intervention, in their 18 words, "is likely to lead to complication of the procedural and substantive posture of this 19 litigation." Oppo. at 6. Kalbers dispatched a similar argument. In Kalbers the district court's prejudice analysis incorrectly focused on how permitting intervention would raise additional complicating issues that would delay the action. The Court of Appeals was unmoved, explaining, "every motion to intervene will complicate or delay a case to some 24 degree – three parties are more than two. That is not a sufficient reason to deny intervention." Kalbers, 22 F.4th at 825. If permitting intervention here leads to complication of the issues, it will be primarily because the law at issue is complicated. 26 Complication here is not a reason to deny intervention by OOIDA. OOIDA is entitled to 28 press its interests through participation in this case.

II. CONCLUSION

For these reasons OOIDA is entitled to intervene as of right. OOIDA may also intervene as a matter of discretion. The Motion for Leave to Intervene is GRANTED.
